[2] The episode was read for the first time by the cast on November 1990 at 10:30 AM. It was filmed in front of a live audience on December 4, 1990. [2] The episode was filmed at CBS Studio Center in Studio City, Los Angeles, California, where, starting with the season two premiere "The Ex-Girlfriend", all filming for the second season took place. [8] The final scene in the episode, which showed Alton Benes singing "Master of the House" in his car, was pre-recorded on December 3, 1990, as it could not be filmed in front of an audience because it took place in a car. [2] Lawrence Tierney was cast as Alton Benes. [9] He was known for his bad-guy roles in films during the 1940s and 1950s, such as Dillinger, The Hoodlum and Born to Kill. [2] Tierney's appearance in the episode is one of his only comedic roles. [2] Cast and crew members were very impressed with his performance. [4] However, they were frightened of him; during filming it was discovered that Tierney had stolen a butcher knife from the knife block in Jerry's apartment set. [5][10] Various cast members remember Seinfeld encountering Tierney and stating "Hey Lawrence, what do you got there in your jacket?" [4] Tierney, realizing he had been caught, tried to make a joke about how he thought taking the knife would be funny, by reenacting a scene from Alfred Hitchcock's Psycho (1960), holding the knife above his head and making threatening motions towards Seinfeld. [5][11] Cherones stated that, afterwards, Larry David would jokingly threaten to have Tierney back on the show if Cherones did his work badly. [4] Reception On February 6, 1991, "The Jacket" was first broadcast in the United States on NBC. It gained a Nielsen rating of 10.4 and an audience share of 16, this means that 10.4% of American households watched the episode, and that 16% of all televisions in use at the time were tuned into it. It faced strong competition from the CBS crime drama Jake and the Fatman; viewers would frequently tune out of Seinfeld to watch the second half Jake and The Fatman's. Seinfeld once jokingly declared that it was due to the fact that the "Fatman" would have worked in the second half of the show. [2] The episode obtained positive responses from critics. Colin Jacobson of Dvd Movie Guide said: "An otherwise mediocre episode, the grumpy turning point of Lawrence Tierney while Elaine's father helps to redeem" The Jacket ". [12] Auditor Jonathan Boudreax considered "The Jacket "one of the Best episodes of the second season, together with "The Chinese restaurant". [13] The critics Mary Kaye Schilling and Mike Flaherty of Entertainment Weekly evaluated the episode with a Bā ¢ è t ", saying: "The tortuous meeting of Jerry e George with Mr. Benes is an induent joy.
